

Turning the Tide

World AIDS Day 2012

The tide is turning against HIV and AIDS.

Since 2005, the number of people dying from AIDS related causes worldwide has decreased by six million, and more people than ever are accessing treatment. But that doesn't mean it is time to stop taking action. Together we can ensure that this reversal continues.

The Presbyterian
Church in Canada

Turning the Tide

World AIDS Day 2012

The tide is turning against HIV and AIDS.

Since 2005, the number of people dying from AIDS related causes worldwide has decreased by six million, and more people than ever are accessing treatment. But that doesn't mean it is time to stop taking action. Together we can ensure that this reversal continues.

The Presbyterian
Church in Canada

Turning the Tide Together

The Presbyterian Church in Canada is actively working with partners around the world to help people fight against stigma and discrimination, provide access to counselling and HIV testing and teach and equip people to prevent its spread. Care is provided to people living with the disease and support to orphans and vulnerable children.

We are working towards a world where there are no new cases of HIV and where mothers don't worry about transmitting the disease to their children. We are living in hope of the time when no more people die of AIDS.

This World AIDS Day, we continue to work together to turn the tide. As we reflect on the challenges and successes in the fight against AIDS, let us keep in prayer those whose lives remain affected.

Turn the Tide

You can inspire others to learn more and help fight AIDS. Talk about AIDS with family and friends. Advocate for treatment for all. Generously support HIV and AIDS programs by raising funds for PWS&D. Together we can turn the tide. www.WeRespond.ca

Turning the Tide Together

The Presbyterian Church in Canada is actively working with partners around the world to help people fight against stigma and discrimination, provide access to counselling and HIV testing and teach and equip people to prevent its spread. Care is provided to people living with the disease and support to orphans and vulnerable children.

We are working towards a world where there are no new cases of HIV and where mothers don't worry about transmitting the disease to their children. We are living in hope of the time when no more people die of AIDS.

This World AIDS Day, we continue to work together to turn the tide. As we reflect on the challenges and successes in the fight against AIDS, let us keep in prayer those whose lives remain affected.

Turn the Tide

You can inspire others to learn more and help fight AIDS. Talk about AIDS with family and friends. Advocate for treatment for all. Generously support HIV and AIDS programs by raising funds for PWS&D. Together we can turn the tide. www.WeRespond.ca

