When the followers of John the Baptist came to Jesus and asked if he was really God's Anointed One, he gave them a very concrete answer. "Go, tell John what you see and hear: those who are suffering from lameness, blindness, deafness, etc. are healed. Tell him also that those who are poor are hearing good news." In effect, people who were marginal in society were to be treated with respect and compassion; in fact, they were at the very heart of Jesus' mission.

According to Jesus there is no good news (or Gospel) if the grace of God does not affect the lives of those most in need. In saying this Jesus realized that he was being radical because he added, "Blessed are those who do not take offence (literally, are not scandalized) because of what I have said."
